A: So the solution is the site did not have any driver for this or it's not compatible with Windows 7 (even though it shows that it's compatible) They did have the latest driver for Windows 7 but it was 32bit, I tried updating my Vista 64bit and it worked. Open and browse to the download link and you should see a 4 digit number at the bottom. Ignore the "Screen Shot". Download and install the "2.5 TVRUDRPACK" as the source and "TVR Driver 2.5TUDRP" as the destination. If you do not see the link to download this for your version, keep looking. Now, you need to perform a test to make sure it works. Simply open the "TVR Driver 2.5TUDRP" on your system and a window should open in which it asks you if you want to upgrade the driver. I would like you to click on "Yes". Once the upgrade is complete, the TVR Driver 2.5TUDRP will be installed. You can now restart your computer to test. Accepting an award from former Vice President Joe Biden in May, Georgia Democrat Lucy McBath said, "Lucy's Law would be a game changer." McBath's son, Jordan Davis, was shot and killed in November 2012 by a man wielding a gun in a Miami-area dispute. She was later invited to Obama’s gun-control-oriented 2014 State of the Union address. The McBath family has actively campaigned for gun-control laws in recent years. McBath's newly-released campaign ad this week shows her followed by a black woman and a white man around a brick patio. The dark-haired woman says, "Lucy McBath. Called to justice. Fighting for Jordan's Law." This week, McBath told Bloomberg News that the ad was "more about the message that justice is possible for any gun violence." McBath said the message was "getting across with everybody." McBath's has raised $310,200, according to the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics. Her first TV ad came out in January. McBath has a more distant third in the race -- and, as of Tuesday, that's without TV advertising. Mike Bennett is the only other Democrat to have significant campaign cash. The 77
