1. Technical Field The present disclosure relates to a display device. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, image display devices including a touch panel function have been proposed as an input device. As an example of the image display device including the touch panel function, a display device has been proposed in which a touch panel and a liquid crystal panel are provided over each other (e.g., JP-A-2012-082277). The display device includes a shield film that is formed over a display panel to shield the display panel from external light. When a pressure is applied to the display panel, the shield film may be deformed. In particular, a force applied to the display panel by a pen or the like may be applied to the shield film. As a result, the shield film may be deformed and the touch panel may be adversely affected.

1. Technical Field This disclosure relates generally to a recirculating exhaust gas heat recovery system for an internal combustion engine, and more particularly to a system that includes a waste heat exchanger to provide a portion of the heat recovery capacity for the exhaust gases. 2. Background Information The internal combustion engine, and especially the diesel engine, has had increasing competition in recent years from the electric motor. In that regard, the diesel engine is less costly to manufacture and maintain and is more compact than a comparable electric motor. One of the ways in which the electric motor, with its greatly reduced size and weight, is superior is that the electric motor can be utilized for prime mover applications such as drive to a generator, while the diesel engine cannot, especially when the latter is combined with a power-take-off unit for such applications. While the diesel engine can be used for prime mover purposes when the latter is combined with a power-take-off unit, such power-takeoff units are usually of large size and weight so that the prime mover of the vehicle cannot be used for both prime mover and power-take-off purposes in a practical way. It would, of course, be desirable to combine the advantages of a diesel engine with the advantages of the electric motor so that the diesel engine could be utilized
