DeskCalendar is a desktop application that offers an interactive monthly calendar and a set of easy-to-use tools. It allows you to add multiple tasks to a single day, including date, time, name, and description. With each task taking only a few mouse clicks to add, you'll be able to keep a record of all your activities. Thank you for taking the time to stop by, and please don't forget to make sure you leave feedback about the software you find through our site so others can benefit from it as well.Effect of multislice gradient-echo sequencing on flow measurements and image quality in abdominal aortic aneurysms: a multicenter trial. To compare the effect of multislice gradient-echo (MSGE) sequences on hemodynamics in abdominal aortic aneurysms (AAAs) and image quality with phase-contrast velocity-encoded (PC-VE) MR angiography (MRA). The institutional review board approved this HIPAA-compliant, multicenter, cross-sectional study; patients provided written informed consent. Sixteen patients with AAAs had both PC-VE and MSGE MRAs. MRAs were performed in 2 (3.5-minute) acquisitions with breath-holding (54%) or breathing-hold (45%). PC-VE measurements were obtained, with venous inflow subtracted, as the average of 3, 30, and 60 frames. MSGE measurements were obtained in 18 directions with 2 averages with and without fat saturation. Two independent readers determined the percentage of intact/invalid pixels (PIPs) in the AAA, using a 4-point Likert scale (5 = no PIPs). The difference between PC-VE and MSGE PIPs for each reader was assessed by using a signed rank test. The scores in the abdominal aortic lumen and non-Abdominal aortic lumen of each phase were compared by using Student t test. Differences of >50% PIPs were considered significant. MSGE decreased PIPs in both AAAs, by an average of 26.4% (95% confidence interval [CI]: 15.2%-36.4%) in the anterior wall and 23.5% (95% CI: 11.1%-35.9%) in the anterolateral wall. With (n = 14) or without (n = 2) fat saturation, the MSGE acquisition required less breath-

Advanced dynamic calendar app with today's featuresLymphocytic bronchiolitis and hyperplasia of mesothelial cells in diffuse alveolar damage. A 65-year-old woman, who had been recently diagnosed as having non-small-cell carcinoma of the lung, developed hypoxemia on the eighth hospital day. Open lung biopsy was performed, and the pathological features consisted of diffuse alveolar damage with massive alveolar inflammatory cell infiltrates, including lymphocytes, plasmacytoid monocytes, plasma cells, and polymorphonuclear leukocytes. There was a severe interstitial fibroblastic proliferation, and an intense lymphocytic bronchiolitis and hyperplasia of mesothelial cells were also observed. The cause of the interstitial fibroblast proliferation was not revealed. In this case, the destruction of the pulmonary parenchyma was presumably preceded by the lymphocytic bronchiolitis and hyperplasia of mesothelial cells. This rare form of diffuse alveolar damage may be related to a lymphocytic interstitial pneumonitis., A. K. M., & Goudfrooij, P. 2007,, 655, 665 Jee, M. J., White, R.
