Sets the command that opens the weather channel's website by default, with some macros to make it easier. Installation: 1) Download, unpack and run the self-extracting archive. 2) Double-click on "GadgetApplication.exe". 3) Copy the application shortcut to your desktop. 4) Right-click on the desktop and select "Create Shortcut" to create a shortcut of the application. 5) Go to Control Panel and choose the "Point to Default Programs" option. 6) Select the program "WxWeather.exe" and hit "Apply". That's it! Compatibility: 64-bit versions of Windows Vista and Windows 7 (32-bit versions can run without problems) Requires Internet Explorer 8 or higher (for updates, online weather and up-to-date forecasts) How to use it: Press the "Open weather channel website" button, and be taken to the website where you can make an inquiry. If the weather has changed since the last time you visited the website, you can refresh by clicking the "Refresh weather page" button. Use the "Cancel" and "OK" buttons to close the Gadget application and get back to your desktop. If you wish to update the weather, click the "Update weather" button to automatically fetch the latest report. For an online update, click the "Update weather" button and be taken to a new page, where you can select which countries and cities to update. The corresponding data will be fetched as soon as possible, and you will be redirected to the site. You can also update the forecast for the next ten days. That's it. Note: If you do not have internet access or you do not want to update the weather, you can always use the "Return to Gadget" button instead, which closes the application and returns to your desktop. The weather channel's website: Scoob.com is a fun game where you use Scoob's supernatural abilities to track down and capture ghosts. It's fun, it's fast, and it's full of scares. What's New in the?

The Weather Channel Sidebar Gadget is a widget for your desktop that displays the current weather conditions for a user-defined location. It is simple to install and set up. The interface is made from a small frame that can be repositioned anywhere on the screen, as well as made to stay on top of other windows. Plus, you can adjust its opacity, thanks to the built-in Windows options. This way, The Weather Channel Sidebar Gadget is unintrusive, and you can easily get current weather details while working in other environments. You can get started by entering a city name or US zip code to let the gadget identify it in the database, and establish the temperature unit (Fahrenheit or Celsius). The Weather Channel Sidebar Gadget shows the highest temperature for the current day, along with the lowest one for the actual and following night. In addition, you can get hour-by-hour weather details and a ten-day forecast, as well as view a live radar online, on The Weather Channel website at Weather.com. The gadget is light on the system resources, running on a very low amount of CPU and RAM. It has a good refresh rate and shows accurate data, without causing the operating to hang, crash or display error notifications in the meantime. We have not come across any issues throughout our evaluation. All in all, The Weather Channel Sidebar Gadget comes in handy whenever you want to get the latest weather report for your location or a different one (for traveling purposes). Updated: You can now install The Weather Channel Sidebar Gadget on Windows 10 machines too! You can also use it to get the weather on your PC in Windows 8 and Windows 7, but it won't work on older versions of the operating system (see FAQ for more info).
