The number of Part A and Part B claims processed by Medicare is set to increase 12% by the year 2015, according to new figures, which proves that the United States still leads in both medicine and care. In the study by BDO USA, a New York-based global provider of accounting, consulting, audit and advisory services, the data to be released Wednesday shows that despite America's appetite for better health care that has its citizens paying into a system that has seen the number of people signing up for Medicare rise to the highest level ever – 27.7 million as of the end of 2010, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. The leading Medicare claims processor is its largest provider, UnitedHealth, with 24.4% market share. After UnitedHealth, the next largest claim processor is Cigna Health Solutions, with 7.7% of market share. ATC Healthcare and Hoffman-LaRoche each have 5.2%. The report offers a detailed look at the hospitals and medical care providers that process the largest number of Medicare claims, which include 4.8 million providers and claims processors, including those that are self-funded. The top six hospitals that processed the greatest number of claims were also the top six providers that spent the most on average on claims processing in 2007, the year for which the Medicare Cost Reports are based. Of those top six providers spending the most on average, UnitedHealth has the most such claims: $12.6 billion. The least costly provider, according to the report, is James River Health System, a 1,900-bed hospital in Virginia. Hospitals with more than

It is fully compatible with Microsoft Office (Excel, Word and PowerPoint) and WPS Office Premium Apk is available for all android os devices such as tablet, mobile phone, etc....Q: JSON model generated by C# is not aligned with the JSON model generated from Swift I have an iOS app in which I have created an object myModel which is composed of several enums and some other variables. It is being used from my server side Swift iOS app which generates an HTTP request and sends it to server side. For further details, I have shared the code below:

private class MyModel { [XmlIgnore] public string A { get; set; } [XmlIgnore] public string B { get; set; } [XmlIgnore] public string C { get; set; } [XmlIgnore] public string D { get; set; } [XmlIgnore] public List E { get; set; } }

Conversion from JSON string to the model is pretty straight forward

var myModel: MyModel = JsonSerializer.Deserialize(jsonString) as! MyModel

Where my model in the

iOS app has a JSON model

myModel [ { A = " 595f342e71
