CrackKeygenMercedesEwaNetEpcWisAsraAllVersionsTorrent At 10:30, Dallas County Deputy Wesley Martin, a 13-year veteran of the sheriff's office, was shot in the leg when his patrol car was struck by gunfire. He has now been placed on administrative leave. "While carrying out his duties, Deputy Martin was in an automobile that was struck by gunfire," the sheriff's department said in a news release. "At the time of the incident, the deputy's wife was seated next to him in the front seat of the vehicle and was not injured.”

Martin then left the scene to seek assistance in a nearby gas station before medical personnel arrived at the scene, the news release said. The incident occurred at 11:45 a.m. in southeast Dallas near the intersection of East Division and East Park.

“Homicide investigators responded and began a search of the immediate area. No suspects were located and the fire department extricated Deputy Martin’s wife from the vehicle. Martin was transported to a local hospital for treatment of his gunshot wound.”

The sheriff’s department received a tip that a juvenile was responsible for the shooting and that a vehicle was involved, but that information was not confirmed. Investigators believe the gunfire came from a vehicle traveling east on West Park Boulevard, the release said. “Additional witnesses who were in the vicinity were interviewed and did not have information about the incident,” the release said.

Q: How to pack different number of items (label+values) in a box in matplotlib? I want to pack some items in a box like the following picture (in red). In this case, I want the three items ((5,10), (9,4), (15, 2)) to fit in the space of one item ((9,4)). Is it possible to do this through matplotlib? Thank you very much.

A: Actually, as seems in the question what you have is:

import matplotlib.pyplot as plt
fig, ax = plt.subplots()
ax.scatter([9, 4, 2, 1, 0, 5], [0,2,3,2,5,4], marker="o")
labels=['dog
