system is filled with security issues and hackers are evolving Gaming activity is growing and not slowing down any time soon, and it's no surprise that more and more computers are being used to play games. The gaming industry has seen explosive growth in recent years and there are more than 400 million gamers worldwide. During the last year, more than half a billion games were played on computers running Windows — and Windows is still so popular that one in four computers in the world runs it. The system of record for games in the online gaming industry is Napster and while that may seem like a sign of stability to some, the facts indicate a steady climb for Windows-based gaming. The Huffington Post Canada reported in January that

Fortnite, which is one of the highest-grossing games in the world, is only available on Windows because it is the most widely used OS. Users can download the client to their computers without a problem, but some are getting some restrictions when it comes to online play. The top complaint for Fortnite is that people were downloading the client through BitTorrent — the peer-to-peer file-sharing program, not the torrent file format, which is something users could avoid downloading. This has led to a knock on the service because people thought it was just downloading software and not necessarily from official sources. The game can be downloaded anywhere and there's no history kept by Steam. The report also said Fortnite is getting bigger by the day and that games like Player Unknown's Battlegrounds, League of Legends and Call of Duty have all run on the Windows OS
